Welcome to the Orca Uprising!

Comrades!

It is our great pleasure to welcome you to the 11th Biennial conference of the European Association for the Study of Literature, Culture, and Environment (EASLCE), hosted at Utrecht University from 14–17 April 2026. This is the first time the conference is being held in the Netherlands, and we are excited to host you in this historic city.

This year's conference invites us to reflect on the many ways in which resistance, justice, and coexistence are imagined across species lines, and to consider how the environmental humanities might contribute to more equitable forms of more-than-human life. The response to the call for papers was truly overwhelming—evidently, this is a topic that resonates with a lot of people. And with over 60 panels and more than 230 speakers across four days, this is undoubtedly one of the largest EASLCE conferences to date. Thank you all for being part of it.

We would like to extend our sincere thanks to our keynote speakers and to the panel chairs and presenters; and to the workshop leaders for creating spaces of exchange beyond the traditional panel format. We are also deeply grateful to the student assistants, volunteers, and support staff at Utrecht University whose efforts behind the scenes have made this event possible. Finally, we would like to acknowledge our sponsors and institutional partners for their generous support.

The organizing committee wish you a lively and inspiring conference!
